REFLECTIONS

I'm writing this on holiday at Amble in Northumberland on the north east coast. Amble calls itself 'the friendliest port' and people do their best to live up to the title. A few days ago we were in Alnwick (there's a new railway there). David Scott (once vicar of St James) once told me that he was born in Alnwick but when he was a boy his parents 'moved south to Gateshead'. It was hard for a Coventry kid like me to imagine!

Soon our Parish Pilgrims will be up here in the real North remembering St. Aidan and St. Cuthbert and walking to Lindisfarne. There is something wonderfully genuine about the saints of the North. On July 25th we remembered St. James an ambitious and noisy fisherman. He tells us that faith needs to be witnessed to by genuine good works.

Soon we will begin a new era of faith and good works – and genuine friendliness – as we grow together' under new management'.
