REFLECTIONS

Pondering on what to write for this week's Pew News, I remembered a reflection I wrote of a particularly busy coffee morning a couple of years ago.

Reflection of a Coffee Morning St James

Folk streamed in through the big oak door,
Many feet across the York Stone floor.
One, two, and families together,
Great support, whatever the weather.

Anne was there to greet and sell,
Ticket by ticket, the raffle went well.
A queue formed quickly at the hatch,
And orders for drinks were duly dispatched.

The Kitchen staff were kept on their toes,
As mugs went dwindling from their rows.
Elizabeth and Rachel bustled about,
Checking the teapots each had their spout.

Teacakes were toasted expertly by Pam,
Promptly served with a choice of jam.
Trays of delights were whisked away,
To find a table - but first to pay.

Surgeon like, there was our Ginny,
With gloves, a knife and wearing her pinny.
She cuts the cakes with great precision,
For folks to choose and make a decision.

Margaret and Chris were a formidable team
Serving those cakes to a steady stream.
The music played above the chatter,
As folk enjoyed their cake, and a natter.

With pen and diary, in the midst of all,
There was our vicar, Father Paul.
Weddings and Christening dates to make;
He'd better hurry, or he'll miss his cake.

The dishwasher whirred, stacked to the brim.
We hoped it wouldn't turn into a spin.
Hands in the sink was our bellringer, Jean;
Ensuring those glasses were sparkling clean.

The laundry was gathering at quite a pace,
For Joy and Dor, to wash and replace.
Table cloths, tea towels, aprons now worn.
All to be ready for our next coffee morn.

Time was nearing the close of day,
The kitchen was tidied by Joy and Kay,
Tables were stacked, as May vac'd the floor,
And finally time to close that big oak door.
